PROPOSAL TO OFFER A MINOR IN FALL 2003

Proposed Name of Minor: Developmental Psychology (Child & Adolescent Emphasis)
Faculty Proposing Minor: Harley Baker, Beatrice de Oca, Kevin Volkan

1. Catalog Description:

MINOR in DEVELOPMENTAL PSYCHOLOGY (Child & Adolescent Emphasis) (18 Units)

The minor in developmental psychology gives students concentrated exposure to the methods and theories related to how children and adolescents develop. Cognitive, emotional, and social perspectives will be covered as well as methods for psychological assessment. The minor in developmental psychology is appropriate for students interested in understanding how human developmental perspectives can influence their major field of study.

2. Justification for Proposed Minor (< 100 words):

The minor in developmental psychology provides an excellent introduction to the tools, methods and theories relevant to the field. Exposure to these characteristics of developmental psychology will enhance a student's ability to perform in many careers, including profit and non-profit sectors. The developmental psychology minor also provides background which may be helpful for entry into masters, doctoral, and professional graduate programs in education as well as the social and behavioral sciences.
